School Profile Text:

Whyalla High School is situated 500 metres from the Whyalla Foreshore overlooking Spencer Gulf and the large well maintained school oval. The attractive main building received Heritage Listing status in 2003. Whyalla Technical High School, as the school was originally known, was built by BHP in 1943 as the first high school in Whyalla and for some years operated as a Trade School for BHP apprentices. The school was renamed Whyalla High School in 1971 and continued to provide education for students in years 8 to 12 until 1991 when secondary education in Whyalla undertook a major restructure. Whyalla High School (WHS) along with the two other public high schools in the town, Edward John Eyre High School (EJEHS) and Stuart High School (SHS), began to operate under the banner of The Whyalla Secondary College with WHS and SHS both providing years 8-10 education and EJEHS catering for years 11 and 12. More recently, in 2011 the Whyalla Secondary Schools Alliance was formed to develop a vision for the future of secondary education in Whyalla.

The school motto Una Omnibus Schola - One School for All is supported by an agreed vision and values that were developed and adopted by the school community.

The core values of the school are Respect, Inclusion, Relationships and Learning Achievement.

Students at Whyalla High School have positive experiences in many areas including academia, sport, arts, music and service to the community.

A rich learning environment has been developed through relationship building strategies, middle school methodologies, personalised learning support and individual opportunities for student's identified pathways. A Student Counsellor, Aboriginal Community Education Officer, and established links with other schools and agencies provide extra support for students and alternative pathways both within and outside of the school community
